

ABOUT ME

My name is Aaron.
I used to go to Headlands
and I went on to be a Captain in the Army.

ABOUT MY JOB

I have recently started a PGCE at the University of Oxford after a career in the British Army as a member of the Royal Electrical and Mechanical Engineers (REME).

I graduated from Welbeck Defence Sixth Form College in 2009 before completing a Civil Engineering Degree at Newcastle University in 2012.

From there I completed the British Army's regular commissioning course at the Royal Military Academy Sandhurst, commissioning into the REME as a Second Lieutenant in 2013.

I have travelled the world with the Army, in charge of engineers and technicians. Deployments have included Kenya, Iraq, Poland, Germany, the Falkland Islands, and Oman.

I left the service in the rank of Captain in September 2020.

SCHOOL RESULTS

I left Headlands in 2007 with one A, five Bs, two Cs and a D at GCSE.

FAVOURITE MEMORIES

Science lessons, the Courmayeur ski trip, school football and cricket.

WHAT I DID NEXT

I went to Sixth Form (Welbeck DSFC, A Levels in Physics, Maths, and Geography, AS level in Chemistry) followed by Newcastle University (BEng Civil Engineering).

MY ADVICE TO STUDENTS

Push yourself to the limit and outside of your comfort zone.
Follow your dreams, the world is a big place and there is so much to see.
