

ABOUT ME

My name is Nicky.
I used to go to Headlands and I'm working to find a Covid vaccine.

ABOUT MY JOB

I now work as a sales manager for a pharmaceuticals company called Sanofi Pasteur, which is the largest global manufacturer of vaccines and I currently manage a team of 18 people manufacturing, selling and delivering the influenza vaccine and in the late stages of a COVID-19 vaccine, which is quite exciting.

I absolutely love my job and managing people and put this largely down to my love of the arts which came directly from Headlands School most notably Mr Jemmison and Mrs Morgan.

It was at Headlands that I fell in love with working with all different types of people and it taught me about confidence and believing in myself. These interpersonal skills are skills that I have carried with me ever since.

I owe an awful lot to this period of my life and base my personality now on these very important years of me growing into a young adult.

SCHOOL RESULTS

I left Headlands School in 2004 with nine GCSEs at A-C and then three AS levels and three A-Levels, getting an A* and an A in drama.

FAVOURITE MEMORIES

My greatest memories of Headlands School were spent in the drama department where I lost the majority of my youth and would not change a thing.

WHAT I DID NEXT

I went on to study Performing Arts at the University of Lincoln then after a break from education retrained in Business Leadership and Effective People Management at Henley Business School.

MY ADVICE TO STUDENTS

You are never too old to learn. Learn in school and continue to push yourself throughout life and keep on learning to be the best you can be.

Develop and invest in you always and I promise, you will see the rewards.
